The following is ISOPE's standard permission statement:

Verbatim reproduction or republication of the papers or articles or part of the articles (e.g., figures or tables) by their authors, after the publication or presentation at the ISOPE meetings and journal, is permitted by the International Society of Offshore and Polar Engineers (ISOPE), provided the full credit is given to the authors, to the publisher, The International Society of Offshore and Polar Engineers (ISOPE), and to the Conference, Symposium or Journal — more specifically not to remove the copyright imprint on page 1 of the paper. The permission does not extend to copying for resale and to re-copyrighting the whole or part of the papers.

Posting on your organization's website of the paper(s) you specified is allowed only where only your organization's employees including the students can view free of charge the paper authored or co-authored by your organization's employees, and www.isope.org is provided for the paper(s) in the ISOPE proceedings or journals.

Subject: Question regarding rights, licences and archiving

To whom it may concern,

I am working with archiving of publications made by Nord University's researchers. All our researchers are required to deposit their publications to our open, institutional repository, either the postprint/accepted manuscript version or the published version.

As some of our researchers have published in ISOPE Proceedings of the International Ocean and Polar Engineering Conference publications, I am wondering whether you allow self-archiving/deposition in our institutional repository, and if so, under what terms?

Best regards,
